China Sky One Medical, Inc. to Develop New Anti-Cancer Drug with Taiwan Golden Biotechnology Corp.

China Sky One Medical, Inc., a leading fully integrated pharmaceutical company in the People’s Republic of China, announced that it signed an agreement with Taiwan Golden Biotechnology Corporation to begin cooperating on the development of a new anti-cancer drug called Antroquinonol.

Golden Biotechnology Corporation specializes in the development of new bio-medicines based on its research in the fields of modern biotechnology and molecular medicine. Antroquinonol is a kind of compound extracted from Antrodia cinnamomea, a rare medicinal fungus that grows naturally inside the Cinnamomum kanehira tree trunk, a native tree species of Taiwan. It can be used in the treatment of liver cancer and lung cancer.

The so-called “King of Medical Fungi” and “Ruby of Taiwan’s Forest,” Antrodia Cinnamomea has been widely used by the Taiwanese to eliminate toxins, protect the liver, improve the immune system, fight allergies, and reduce blood fat.

Golden Biotechnology Corporation’s research department accidentally discovered Antroquinonol when it was studying the efficacy of the extract from Antrodia Cinnamomea. In a further study, Antroquinonol has been proven to restrain the growth and reproduction of cancer cells, though the existing extracts only take effect slowly due to low concentration of Antroquinonol. Through sophisticated extraction techniques, Golden Biotechnology Corporation acquired pure Antroquinonol, which has been granted patents in 60 countries. Pre-clinical research on Antroquinonol has been completed in the United Kingdom and in the United States the compound has been approved by the U.S. FDA to enter into first stage clinical trials.
